General Comments

A renewal inspection was conducted today. The children were observed arriving from school and transitioning into their indoor learning environment. The room was organized and welcoming, with a variety of invitations thoughtfully set up for the children. These included a workbench area stocked with tools, safety vests, and building materials. The art center had an invitation asking, "What can you make out of clay?" with fresh clay blocks provided for children to use. Additional materials available throughout the environment included a mini pool table, a foosball table, and bins of Lego stored neatly on shelving. Open-ended artwork created by the children was displayed throughout the room, and a birthday board was also observed.
New cubbies had been installed, providing each child with an individual space and hook for their belongings.
The parent information board was reviewed and found to be complete and up to date. Staff files were reviewed, along with a random review of three children's files, all of which were organized and readily accessible for inspection.
Emergency evacuation procedures and a first aid kit was observed. All exits were observed to be free from clutter and easily accessible. Fire drill records were reviewed and found to be current and complete. The daily routine was posted on the parent information board.
