General Comments

When licensing staff arrived, the operator and children were getting ready to go for a walk. The children were excited to show off their new wagon. All, but one child that wanted to walk were secured in the wagon and then the operator walked down to the green space to allow the children to run and explore. The operator suggested picking up some leaves when one child wanted to keep running down the trail. After a period of time, the operator suggested heading back to play on the deck. Upon return, the operator helped individual children get on the porch ensuring their safety. A suggestion is to make sure any unsafe items are removed, and the porch is kept clean for play.

The operator suggested going inside to play before lunch and naps. The operator helped children get undressed and then helped children down the stairs, if needed. A bookshelf and tent with pillows have been added to the smaller room offering a space for reading and comfort. A child pointed out a new slide in the main room. Children's artwork was posted throughout the room, and the operator has created a portfolio for each child with learning stories and their artwork. A reminder was given about the importance of open-ended art activities and ensuring children's names are dominant in the environment as their names are the first connection to print literacy. Children's names are labelled on cubbies downstairs and upstairs and individual photos of each child are posted with their names. One child asked to draw a picture, and each child was offered a white sheet of paper and a selection of markers.

Child files were reviewed and a reminder given to the operator to make sure every parent provides two emergency contacts, in case of an emergency. Infant-toddler daily information forms are being completed as well as daily attendance records.
