General Comments When the QAM arrived in the morning, she observed children engaged in play within the outdoor learning environment. Children were participating in a variety of activities, including playing with balls, playing hide-and-seek, exploring the sandbox, and using the slide. Additional materials and play opportunities available to the children included a mud kitchen, colouring activities, cars, blocks, and trains. The outdoor space also featured a large grassy area that provided opportunities for active play and movement. The QAM subsequently observed the indoor learning environment. Documentation displayed throughout the room highlighted children's participation in sensory experiences, outdoor play, fall-themed colouring activities, and loose parts exploration. The learning environment was well stocked with a variety of materials and resources to support literacy, art, dramatic play, and construction experiences. The parent information board and fire drill records were reviewed and found to be accurate and up to date.
