General Comments

The two groups had a field trip to Queen's Square this morning. This allows the children to play outside during the cooler part of the day as they use the gym in the afternoon. Today, they also had the opportunity to visit the indoor climber.

The children in both rooms were engaged in free play and then ate snack, used the washroom and washed their hands before cleaning up the rooms to go to the gym.

As summer camps just began this week, the walls are bare in each room waiting for the children's artwork, thoughts and documentation to be posted.

The children in the younger age group enjoyed a number of books with one educator as others were playing games, creating creations and bracelets with beads, playing with a slinky, dinosaurs and coloring.

The older children enjoyed imaginative play with magnetics, coloring and some children were creating clothing for two wooden bodies.

There was a bookshelf full on both sides, science items, and a number of games and resources in the older children's room. However, there were only 10 story books in the younger children's space, three board games and three card games. The Quality Assurance Monitor and administrator discussed the need for more resources and the administrator is already aware of this and has been making efforts to order and replenish each room.

The educators were observed in each room giving children reminders of appropriate behavior with friends and resources. They offered choices to the children and checked in with children often. The educators got down to the children's level and engaged in play with them. Two educators in the younger children's room do not have their First Aid certificate and cannot be left alone without a trained educator in First Aid. On today's visit, there were two additional educators in the room with their First Aid certification.
