General Comments

Upon arrival, Nancy Glendenning and Troy Williams circulated throughout the facility to speak to each of the educators and to obtain child / staff ratio.

Throughout each of the classrooms child attendance was maintained appropriately and in the infant room infant / toddler sheets were being filled out as necessary.

Documentation was evident. It included child portfolios, learning stories, pictures, descriptions of characteristics of the children, and the children's artwork to name a few.

The educators were very loving and caring towards the children. They were observed engaged and helping children problem solve. I observed one of the educators guiding a child to wear warmer boots as they were persistent in wanting to wear rubber boots and there was snow in the outdoor play space. The educator picked up one rubber boot and one snow boot and asked the child which one felt like it would be warmer to help them make a better choice.

Some of the educators in some of the classrooms had identifiers posted for the children so new or relief staff would know a little bit about them. For example, the information included name labels as to where they sleep in the classroom likes, allergies, and their comfort items for sleep.

Potential illness forms, return after exclusion forms, Fire drill records, and medication records are being used as necessary. Staff and children's files contained all necessary information. Filing system is organized and complete.

Outdoor play is evident. Children were observed having both morning and afternoon play outside.

Meals and snacks are given at appropriate times. Lunches are brought in by the parent(s) and snacks are provided by the centre.
