General Comments The children were in the process of making their own end of the year t-shirts. The shirts were taped to table so the children could draw on them and have the other children in the class to write their names on them. As the children finished with the t-shirts, they had some time for free play before circle time. They sang the "Good Morning Song" and talked about the weather and what day it was. After circle time, the children had their snack. The educators promote independence in the room by encouraging and showing the children how to open their packaged snacks and containers. After snack time the children practiced the songs, they were going to sing at year end ceremony. After practicing the songs, the educator read a book, "Willbee the Bumble Bee". As one educator read the book, the other educator set the tables up for a craft activity of with clay, pipe cleaners, popsicle sticks and plastic eyes. There was also a basket of plastic insects for the children. The idea was for the children to create an insect or whatever else they wanted to create. Some of the children made insects while others made a dinosaur. The educators work extremely well together. While one educator was doing an activity with the children, the other educators was preparing for the next activity. Everything ran smoothly during the visit.
