General Comments

A monitoring inspection took place in the afternoon of November 2025

The children were observed in both indoor and outdoor environments, including the transition between the two. Both groups transitioned to the outdoor playground after being dismissed from school.

Outdoors: Both groups of children were observed in activities such as playing wall ball, basketball, using the stationary equipment, and drawing.

Upon returning to the facility, several children from both groups were observed eating snack with handwashing occurring beforehand, while others participated in free play.

Upstairs Group: After snack, the children were observed in free play activities, including building with magnetic cubes and creating art at the table. The educators indicated that the children are currently interested in fidget toys, art, building with magnetic blocks, and action figures.

Downstairs Group: After snack, the children participated in free play activities such as drawing at the table, building with large Lego bricks, and playing with sensory toys. The educators indicated that the children are currently interested in art, sensory play, and building with blocks.

Preschool Group: The half-day preschool children were not in attendance.

Documentation was visible throughout both rooms, including photographs, individual and group artwork, and planning books. The rooms were well-organized and inviting, offering a varied supply of age-appropriate materials, books, and toys.

Educators demonstrated positive interactions by using encouraging language and gentle reminders. They asked open-ended questions, listened actively, and extended children's ideas through conversations.

A clearly visible and prominent area was designated for posting the facility license, current monitoring reports,
