General Comments When QAM entered the learning environment in the morning, children were observed colouring pictures, exploring the sensory table, and engaging in dramatic play with pretend food and baby dolls. The learning environment had an ongoing project focused on fall and apples. Children had participated in apple taste testing and were learning about different varieties of apples. Educators indicated that they planned to extend the project by making applesauce with the children. The sensory table contained oatmeal and other ingredients associated with making apple crisp, which was connected to the ongoing project. The children were also being prepared for a planned lockdown drill, as the facility is located within a school. Some children expressed concern about the upcoming drill. QAM observed educators responding calmly, offering comfort and reassurance to the children, and explaining that they would be safe. QAM reviewed the child-to-staff ratio, incident reports, parent board, and fire drill documentation. All requirements reviewed were found to be accurate and up to date.
