General Comments When QAM visited the facility in the morning, three two-year-old classrooms were observed. The learning environments included invitations for play with playdough, blocks, and dramatic play materials. In one classroom, children were listening to music, singing, and participating in actions with the educators. Educators were observed sitting with the children and engaging alongside them in activities, including playdough and a painting activity using paper towels. QAM also observed a group of children in the outdoor learning environment. Limited play materials were available at the time of the observation, consisting of two bubble wands and a toy truck. QAM spoke with the administrator regarding the importance of ensuring educators bring a variety of materials into the outdoor learning environment to support children's engagement and provide multiple opportunities for play and exploration. Child-to-staff ratios were met at the time of the observation. The parent board and staff files were reviewed and found to be complete and up to date.
