General Comments
At the time of the QAM observation, children in the After-School Program were returning from outdoor play. Upon entering the program space, all children were observed washing their hands and taking a water break due to the warm weather. Following the transition indoors, a group of children participated in a game of Bingo with the educator, while other children engaged in independent LEGO building activities. The educator reported that children have participated in a variety of summer activities, including visits to a nearby splash pad and baseball field, LEGO building experiences, and board games. The learning environment was clean, organized, and provided a sufficient quantity and variety of materials to support children's play and engagement. The educator was observed interacting positively with children and providing consistent supervision throughout the observation period.
