General Comments

When I arrived, the children were engaged in play. Somewhere doing arts and crafts at the table, somewhere playing in the play kitchen area and some were beading.

Around 2:20, two educators organized a game on the carpets. The other educator stayed in the play area with the other children.

Staff were engaged with the children, playing with them, talking with them. They were attentive to the children's needs and helped them when needed such as getting materials out for them, answering questions or consoling them when needed.

Educators used positive child guidance practices such as gentle reminders, positive reinforcement, encouragements and offering children choices.

One educator advised the Inspector that every Wednesday, weather permitting, when the children arrive, they have a picnic outside with them.

There are sufficient quantity of materials and of variety for the children, arts and crafts, blocks, books, games, puzzles, materials for mathematical learning, a play kitchen area and more.

There is more than the minimum requirement of educators on site, therefore, ratio is always maintained even when children are accompanied to the bathroom that is located upstairs.

The parent board in the entrance is maintained and contained all required documents, including copies of the most recent inspections.

Administrative records are maintained and contain all the required information.

Everything is in compliance; I recommend for renewal.
