Indoors, one small group was playing with blocks, another group was playing hockey, and a third group was playing with race tracks. Following this, the children participated in a structured activity: the game "Simon Says." After this activity, the educator proposed several games and invited the children to choose. They selected a guessing game called "Who Are We Talking About." In this game, one child sits with their back to the others. Meanwhile, the other children line up, and once everyone is ready, the seated child must guess who the first speaker is.
