The children showed a sense of pride as they celebrated getting their winter gear on independently.

Monkey Tails Room: The children were excited to share with licensing staff that they were getting ready to go outside to take part in a heart scavenger hunt. The educator in the room gave some of the children the option to be her helper, by helping her hide the hearts outside. The other children were then invited to search for the hidden hearts in the snow.

Firefly Room: The children were observed creating Valentine bags in the art area, playing with trains, train tracks, and coloring. The educators in the room were both observed engaging with the children. The children were observed taking part in a Valentine's activity called "How Many Kisses Tall Are You?" The educator measured each child with Hershey Kisses.

Transitions in all rooms ran smoothly. All classrooms were observed going outside, washing hands, during mealtimes, and nap time. The educators were observed having positive interactions with the children. The classroom environments were calm, and all areas of the rooms had materials that were age appropriate, down at the children's level, and open and ready for all children to explore throughout the day.
