General Comments When the QAM arrived in the morning, she observed the Preschool learning environment. Invitations included a sensory table featuring fall-themed materials, a colouring activity, and fidget toys. Documentation displayed throughout the room included children's artwork, an Every Child Matters activity, a community wall, and a web documenting the children's learning about bugs. Educators shared that the children's current interests are pumpkins, fall, and bugs. During the observation, children were engaged in play with cars and a variety of other toys alongside an educator. The QAM had a discussion with the educators regarding the loft area. It was noted that if the loft area is being used by children, it should be intentionally organized and arranged to provide a variety of learning and play opportunities rather than being used primarily for storage. The QAM also reminded educators that toilet seat inserts used during toileting should be stored in a sanitary manner and not placed on the floor beside the toilet. Educators indicated that they have a hanger available and will use it to store the inserts appropriately. The parent information board was reviewed and found to be accurate, complete, and up to date.
