General Comments

Licensing Staff arrived at the facility to conduct a Monitoring Inspection. Upon arrival, all Educators had walked to the school to meet the children at dismissal time. Licensing Staff met the group on the outdoor playground. Attendance records were up to date, and an Educator from each group had a first aid kit in their bookbag. The older children were using the larger playground, while the younger children played in the smaller playground area.

During outdoor play, the children were observed having races, using the swings, and practicing a dance routine. When it was time to transition indoors, the children gathered their bookbags and jackets and found a partner to stand with. Several headcounts were completed to ensure all children were accounted for before the group went inside.

Upon entering the facility, each child had their own labelled hook for their jacket and bookbag. The indoor environment was well organized and welcoming. An allergy list was visibly posted, and life-saving medications were kept in a bookbag carried by an Educator.

The older children were observed playing Bingo, while the younger children participated in free play. One Educator was setting up activities at the tables, while other children chose to colour, play with magnetic cubes, and build with Lego.

Throughout the Monitoring Inspection, only positive child guidance was observed. Educators were attentive to the children's needs and actively involved them in the daily routine. Educators were also observed communicating with one another during bathroom breaks to ensure appropriate ratios were maintained at all times.
