General Comments

When I arrived for today's renewal inspection all infant and preschool children were outside playing.

The facility's outside environment offers an abundance of different natural elements, materials and surfaces which encourage different types of play and also encourages children to explore all aspects of the environment. The outside environment is designed in a way that permits educators to always supervise the children effectively.

While outside, educators were observed being attentive and playing with the children during time of inspection. They were observed providing gentle reminders to the children when need be. They were also observed ensuring they got down to the children's level when speaking with them.

Children and educators were excited to be outside during the first snow fall of the year. Some children were observed running around trying to catch snowflakes in their mouths, while others were laying on the ground staring up at the sky and others were playing with the little bit of snow that had gathered on the large slabs of tree in the yard.

When it was time to come in for lunch, educators encouraged the children to remove their outside clothes independently but were always near to help. Observed lots of encouraging words while children were trying to get ready on their own. Educators ensured children properly washed their hands before they had lunch. The after-school educators greeted the school age children at the bus stop when they get off the bus. They all walked back to the facility together, the children then put their belongs away, washed their hands and played freely around the room until snack time.

Once all infants, preschoolers and school age children were finished snack, they all excitedly got ready to play outside in the snow!

The facility's indoor environment offers a very bright and caring atmosphere for children to grow, learn and thrive in. The preschool and school age classrooms have an abundance of learning materials that meet the interests of the children. The indoor environment is also set up in a way that promotes independence by having
