General Comments

When licensing arrived on a PD Day, children were located in the gym playing a game decided by the group. Two educators were present with the group of children maintaining the child-to-staff ratio.

The children were familiar with the schedule of the day, and educators gave reminders of the time for transitions. Licensing staff noticed the level of respect given to children to problem solve and independently choose what activities and group of children to engage with. An educator was observed giving a child space upon arrival to transition from home to the centre and then checking in often with the child. In the smaller rooms, children's artwork was displayed and writing materials and supplies were easily accessible. A variety of resources were located throughout the space providing a variety for children to choose from.

Licensing staff and the operator had a discussion regarding the new regulations. A recommendation was given to the operator to post children's names somewhere in the facility to nurture a sense of belonging however, it should be authentic to the program and its values.
