General Comments Licensing staff arrived to conduct a monitoring visit. The children were having a very lively circle time where they were playing a hibernation song that involved following directions, singing and pretending to hibernate, waking up, jumping and a variety of other actions involving animals that hibernate. Hibernation has been this week's theme, and the children are really interested in it. The educators set up a sensory table using little plastic animals like squirrels and raccoons, number cards and di with a variety of seasonal loose parts. One of the educators helped them use the dice and number cards to explore items that go in the animal's winter den. This was very popular and used numbers and amounts in a very concrete way. The classroom has a variety of other invitations set up and areas for specific learning and play such as the large art table and art supplies on the adjacent shelf, a carpet with books for reading and sufficient room for circle time, another carpet to build on with a variety of blocks and loose parts, a cozy corner with netting, dress up, and a kitchen area to name a few. The classroom is calm with a lot of natural materials like tree stump seats and the children's arts and crafts were displayed such as the paper squirrels that they made with cinnamon, coffee and cloves. There were family pictures from Thanksgiving, classroom pictures of the class for their birthdays and multiple learning stories displayed on the walls. The daily schedule is well suited to this active group; they open in the morning outside in their fenced in outdoor play area, then snack, free play, circle and three times a week the whole group walks the trails, or the neighbourhood with more outside play in the large play area until lunch. Today the group went for a nature walk in the neighbourhood looking for squirrel nests. The first aid kit and attendance records were taken on the walk, the parent board is update, fire drills and all administrative tasks are complete and up to date. Supervision, and the classroom and group management were excellent. The educators are kind and firm and genuinely interested and engaged with the children. All their transition were smooth, and their activities and the classroom atmosphere were pleasant and peaceful.
