General Comments
A monitoring inspection was conducted today on the four preschool rooms on the license. Four new and current staff files were reviewed and verified complete with all required documentation. During the inspection, the environments were not observed in rooms seven and eight as the children were sleeping at the time of the inspection. Ratio was taken in these rooms as well as the two other childcare rooms on this license, and child-to-staff ratio was being met. Children were observed sleeping, while others were observed playing quietly. In the two preschool rooms that observations did occur, the children's learning and exploration has been documented a displayed on the walls in the form of pictures, learning stories, captions, and art. Pictures of the children and their families, creating faces with loose parts, a web of the new interest, dinosaurs, charts with the children's words of what they know about dinosaurs, leaf painting and the children making crowns, and letter painting are displayed on the walls in one of the preschool rooms. In another preschool room, the Inspector observed that a tuff tray was available for the children with items to create "apple pie." Bowls, spoons, red pompoms, cinnamon flavoured oatmeal were able, and the children were observed creating "apple pie." Webs of the children's learnings were observed on the wall, showing their interests in fall, and storytelling. Both webs had pictures of the children exploring bugs, leaves, pumpkins, creating their own books. Children on this license were also observed going for a walk, returning from a walk, and transitioning to lunch. Educators were observed in the childcare rooms, down at the level of the children in their learning, play and observed rubbing children's backs while they settled for nap/quiet time. Educators were observed using positive child guidance techniques when speaking to the children and using redirection.
