General Comments When observing the indoor learning environments, children were preparing to go outside. Educators were observed assisting children with the application of sunscreen. The learning environments contained an appropriate variety of materials, including art supplies, dramatic play resources, building materials, and literacy opportunities. Educators shared that the children's current interests include gardening in the outdoor play area and learning about community members. The outdoor learning environment provided a variety of opportunities for children to engage in play and exploration. The QAM observed an educator reading with a child in the outdoor reading area. Additional materials available included tires for jumping, balls, a caterpillar tunnel, a slide, flowers, a mud kitchen, a sandbox, and a music wall. The outdoor area appeared clean, safe, and well organized. Documentation reviewed indicated that staff-to-child ratios, the parent information board, and fire drill records were current and up to date.
