General Comments
During the inspection, the QAM observed that all learning environments included documentation, invitations to play, block play materials, dramatic play resources, art experiences, and literacy materials. When speaking with educators, they identified the children's current interests as outdoor play, colour mixing, and insects. The outdoor learning environment provided children with access to a variety of materials and experiences, including mud kitchens, hammocks, a tire swing, toy trucks, forts, a jungle gym, and art materials. The QAM verified that child-to-staff ratios were being maintained. Fire drill records and parent information boards were reviewed and found to be current, accurate, and up to date.
