General Comments

Upon arrival, the children were eating their lunch. The educators were observed sitting at the table with the children supervising them while eating. The educators were heard encouraging the children to eat their healthy foods before eating desserts. After lunch, the children washed their hands and engaged in free play activities such as arts and crafts and Legos. The educators were observed cleaning up the lunch tables and then sanitizing them. Another educator was observed vacuuming the floors and then changing a few children's diapers. Proper diaper changing procedures were followed.

During this time, the afterschool groups arrived at the centre. The children were observed storing their belongings in their cubbies before washing their hands for hot lunch. The children sat down at the table and ate hot lunch. The educators were observed sitting at the table with the children while they ate. The children finished eating and the educators prompted them to use the washroom, wash their hands and fill up their water bottles as they were heading out in the community for a nature outing. The children agreed and got ready for the outing.

Once the pre-school aged children were done engaging in free play activities, some children took a nap while others chose not to nap and engaged in free play activities such as playing with Legos, building blocks, train tracks, coloring rainbows and reading a book with an educator. The educators were engaged in the children's activities and were observed playing with the children during "quiet time".

The educators were in touch with the children's needs as some educators were observed wiping noses, offering water to the children and changing diapers. The indoor environment was clean, bright and welcoming and had no potential hazards. Children's artifacts and pictures were displayed in the classrooms. Child profiles were verified and completed, daily attendance was taken, and the employee files were verified and complete.
