General Comments

Children had just finished snack and were getting ready for outdoor exploration time when I arrived. The area of outdoor play was in the apple tree area. Once the educators and children arrived at this area, the educators reviewed the boundaries of where the children could go.

During the outdoor time the children were engaged in a variety of activities from making potions in the mud kitchen, rolling logs over to look for bugs and worms, to climbing trees. There was also a word game and books on the picnic tables for the children to play and read.

Educators were observed counting children and communicating with each when taking children to the bathroom and other areas. Educators were attentive to the children's needs and spoke to the children at their level and had discussion on what the children were doing and things they found.

Before it was time to go inside for lunch the children gathered at the picnic tables and read a story. The story was "One day in the forest".

During lunch time the educators sat with the children and played "I spy" and "Simon says" as the children ate. The children are very comfortable in the environment and familiar with the daily routine. There is a mutual respect between the educators and children.
