General Comments

The administrator was in the part-time preschool program this morning as an educator was out. The regular educators were in the four-year-old room and evidence of documentation was posted throughout the room. They have a new question on the Would you rather? board for children offering a choice between allergic to grass or allergic to chocolate. Several of the learning stories provided connections and celebrations of home and community such as a visit from Poppy, and a nurse and firefighter visiting.

The white board showed they are discussing food groups and there was an activity posted of cutting items from grocery store flyers. A grocery store centre is set up in the room with individually crocheted food items filling the shelves underneath. A very welcome play invitation. An invitation to share Adventures with Hoot is posted on the wall with photos of the children's adventures.

The educators encouraged the children to go to the story mat after lunch and choose a puzzle or book to read. One child wanted to take a nap and were provided a cot and blankets to rest. The rest of the children joined the group on the mat. Children engaged in play with blocks or magnetic links. Other children were playing a
