General Comments

Upon arrival of licensing staff, the children were engaged in free play and listening to music. The children and the operator started a dance party. The operator was observed singing and dancing with the children. They sang the alphabet song, and the children were pointing at the letters on the wall. The children also started pointing at pictures of themselves and their friends that were up on the wall. The operator then put the cleaning song on, and the children were observed singing as they cleaned with the operator. The operator thanked the children for helping. They all gathered in the cozy corner for story time. The operator was pointing at the book and using lots of expressions to keep the children engaged. The children then wanted to read their own book, so the operator passed the books around. The children were observed pointing and naming the different things they could see in the book. The operator was engaging in conversation with the children and sitting with them. One child wanted the book that another child had so the operator redirected the child and provided various other options.

The children then gathered at the table to play with wooden peg puzzles. The operator sat with the children and was observed talking to the children about the different animals and vehicles on the boards. The operator did diaper change, and the children washed their hands and got settled at the table for lunch. The operator heated up the lunches and helped the children. One child arrived and was upset that their parent was leaving. The operator held and comforted the child. The child then sat and ate with the others. The children washed their hands and engaged in free play as the others finished eating lunch. Some were driving around with trucks and took out construction tools to "fix" different things in the room. Once everyone was cleaned up from lunch, they got ready for nap. The operator helped the children get settled, covered them with blankets, played soft music, and sat in the room as they fell asleep. The operator played with the child that wasn't sleeping. They played with blocks and trucks together and the operator was doing checks on the others.

The indoor environment had various resources accessible in labeled bins for the children to play with. Various materials were available, such as blocks, trucks, animals, dolls, musical instruments, a kitchen, construction tools, and a cozy corner with books. The walls were decorated with the children's artwork and pictures of recent activities. Child files and staff files were checked and contained required documents.
