General Comments

When licensing staff arrived, the preschool children were on the playground with educators. The preschool educators were sitting at the front of the playground chatting while the two-year-old educator was engaged in play with the children. The preschool educators then joined the children in play and to push children on the swing.

The outdoor play area is large and provided opportunities for children to swing, climb, play in the sand, imagine, and move. Educators had children line up at the gate to go back into the centre ensuring each child was accounted for.

Children had shepherd's pie today for lunch, as posted on the menu. After lunch, children engage in free play before preparing for nap. On today's visit, each room was clean and organized reflecting the curriculum areas. There was evidence throughout the centre of documentation. A practicum student in the infant room has created a poster highlighting a provocation and supporting documentation and connections. Open-ended art was posted throughout the infant spaces, as well.

Educators sat with children going to sleep rubbing backs when needed or providing a book to transition. If children were not tired, they were provided quiet activities to play with.
