General Comments A renewal inspection occurred today. During the visit, children were observed in their indoor environments, and educators were actively engaged alongside third-party workers. In the upstairs room, sensory tables were prepared with sand and water, offering children opportunities for exploration. Painting activities were also available, encouraging artistic expression. Additionally, children were seen making playdough with one of the educators, an activity that supported fine motor development and cooperative play. Downstairs, the children showed a clear interest in transportation, and the artwork displayed throughout the room reflected this theme. One project involved creating stop lights out of colored tissue paper, which reinforced concepts of safety and community awareness. Musical engagement was also evident, as an educator had set up a piano with notes written on the keys to match a songbook created with the children. Documentation was prominently displayed, including an open-ended project titled "We Remember". Both upstairs and downstairs environments offered diverse opportunities for creativity, exploration, and thematic learning. They environments had dress up costumes and also kitchen sets with play food and dishes. The program is part -time preschool age and did not need an inspection of nap requirements. All staff files were reviewed and verified as complete. A random review of children's files was also conducted, and all records were found to be complete. A reminder was given to the educators about getting incident reports signed. There was one incident report not signed but the parent was notified, and all previous incident reports were organized and complete.
