General Comments
Preschool Room Observation The QAM observed documentation on the walls and that each child has a portfolio with documentation demonstrating their learning and experiences. Learning invitations were available throughout the room, including finger painting, various art materials, and a chalkboard. The educator reported that children have recently shown interest in cars, dramatic play with toy babies, painting, and practicing cutting skills with scissors. Positive child guidance was observed consistently in the learning environment, including during transitions to circle time. Circle time was offered as an open invitation rather than a required activity, allowing children to participate at their own discretion. The learning environment was well-equipped with materials supporting art, literacy, dramatic play, sensory exploration, and block play. The QAM reminded staff that the parent board must display the most recent Monitoring Inspection Report and that all Renewal Inspection Reports must be easily accessible for parents who wish to review them.
