General Comments Most classrooms demonstrated that they have a pre-planned flexible program that is built on the children's interests. They are using pictures, children's artwork, and learning stories to demonstrate the children's learning. The educators are adding props and materials into the environment to enhance the children's learning and interests. Invitations to play are set up for the children during transitions times which engages the children causing transitions to be more calming. In the junior toddler room, the educators had large pieces of paper stuck to the tables allowing the children to put stickers on it and bingo dab while diaper changing was occurring. Educators were observed engaging with children through conversation, playing and taking interest in what the children were doing. If a problem occurred within the environment, educators were observed redirecting or helping children problem solve before they intervened to find a solution. There were noticeable changes in the 3's and 4's classrooms. These classrooms are less cluttered and more organized. However, the educators in the 4-year-old room should moving towards more child led activities for the children. The filing system was organized, and documents were easily verified by licensing staff. Licensing staff can recommend facility for licensing.
