General Comments

I arrived prior to children and received time to speak to the school age educators. Educators are keeping complete and detailed records of the children in their care. Incident reports, potential illness forms, medication records, attendance records, and fire drill records are being filled out as required. All child and educator files are organized and the information for licensing was easily verified.

The educators have moved the older school age children into the larger space because there are more children in the grades 3 to 5 than any other group. The rooms are set up with many learning centres including Reading, Science, Art, Dramatic play, Math and Literacy, and Blocks, to just name a few.

The educators are using an open-ended style to document their program. Their documentation is broken up into categories including artistic / creative, science / sensory, dramatic play, math / literacy and outdoor / gross motor. One of the educators stated that they set up invitations to play but they will add activities or materials under the categories if something else interests the children on any given day.

The playground has many different surfaces including cement, pea gravel, and also grass. The children were observed on ride on cars, rolling tires, in kitchen areas in two different areas of the outdoor play space and at a table doing Art. Parachutes, hockey sticks, a basketball net, and benches were also evident in the space. The children appeared busy and content as they engaged in their chosen activities.
