General Comments

On the afternoon of my visit, children and leaders were enjoying their first day of Summer Camp. Children were divided into Group A and B. Upon my arrival, Group A was returning from a walk and playing on the swings. Group B was preparing for water play. The programming was posted on the information board and the days include a variety of activities- icebreakers, gym games, arts and crafts, water games, stem, and themed activities.

Despite there being some busy, challenging transitions and adjustments to the first day of Camp, I noted multiple times that leaders worked together and used effective communication and child guidance. The use of walkie-talkies also helps for staff to keep in touch with one another whether inside, outside or on the upper or lower level of the club.

Children were spoken to in a patient, kind and understanding tone. Children were provided with expectations, compassion and choices.

To kick off the week, team leaders and staff have each chosen a Pokémon name to be called for the summer. Their staff lanyards have the corresponding Pokémon card or label. Children thought this was a lot of fun and were choosing their own Pokémon names for the summer.

Snack was blueberries, apples, grapes, cucumbers, and granola bars. Leaders continued to make sure children had water in their bottles and were drinking throughout the afternoon. I also saw the leaders continuing to count the children to confirm attendance numbers.

Staff files and child files were checked and all requirements were included and files are well organized.
