General Comments
March Break so numbers were reduced. There were four educators in total when all arrived spending time between the two rooms with the children. There are plenty of resources available in each room including art materials, board games, lego, kitchen, marbleworks, magnetics and books. There is a book shelf in each room with information books, chapter books and picture books. The daily schedule for the day is posted on the whiteboard in each room and the children check it to see what's next. The rooms were clean and organized with all resources accessible to the children. Many of the educators got down on the floor with the children, playing a variety of games such as chess and battleship. The educators collaborated with the children on rules, allowed the children to explain new games or ideas for play, and invited children into play. The children were observed in conversation with the educators and laughing and joking. One educator took the lead between both rooms and informed the other educators of the routine and informed children they were supervising and couldn't play with them. Due to the march break, additional games were present for novelty. There was some negotiation on going outside due to the rain but one of the administrators noticed the sun was out and recommended going outside. Children got ready and went outside before lunch. The educators negotiated rules during bingo allowing additional winners. The educators continued to remind children of the rules related to safety. This centre communicates over radios to ensure everyone is aware of where children are and if support is needed. When children arrive at the door in the morning, they are welcomed by one educator who makes the educators upstairs who has arrived. Lots of communication.
