General Comments
On the day of my visit the children were finishing up snack and the older children were getting ready for out door play time.
The infants were having a sensory session as they carved a pumpkin to make jack-o-lantern. They were playing with the insides of the pumpkin.
I went outside to see the preschool age children. They were enjoying a wide range of activities from tree climbing, playing in the leaves and swinging.
All the educators through out the center were friendly and engaged with the children.
There is evidence of planned programing and documentation of the children's learning.
