General Comments

It is March break this week and so I looked at the programming during my visit. It appears that the program is active. Every day had creative planning and the children seemed to enjoy the activities. Today I was told that they went to the manor in the morning to bring cards and to make things in the snow as the residents watched through the windows. During my visit I saw the children make snow volcanos, which was planned for science day yesterday but the weather didn't allow it to happen until today. Then the children went sliding on the hill outside while listening to music.

I looked at the child files and all necessary information appears to be there, except some of the Medicare numbers have expired and will need to be updated as soon as possible. I also looked at the documentation on the walls, and more up to date documentation would be suggested. The indoor area appears clean and has a variety of age-appropriate materials to play with. The program appears to be running smoothly.

Please update the contact information for the Quality Assurance Monitor and the Inspector in the postings.
