Observations:

Baby's room: children were playing outside; one group was still inside, and they were playing with blocks. I could see in each room, family pictures, documentation, learning stories, zones that are inviting with materials that are at the children's level.

Two's: Children were outside during the visit; The room is inviting for children to play into, I could see webbing and documentation on the walls.

Three's: Children were outside during the visit; the room offers multiple options for children to create and explore, material is accessible and at children's level.

Four's: Children were into free play; some were drawing another group was into the pretend play corner. Another group was building with wooden blocks and some were into play-doh and the sandbox. The room and material offer lots of opportunities for children to play and create.
