General Comments

A renewal inspection was conducted today. Children were observed in both the indoor and outdoor learning environments throughout the visit. The parent information board was reviewed and found to be complete and up to date, displaying all required information, including previous monitoring and renewal inspection reports, licensing information, and the daily routine.

Children were observed during snack and lunch times. Educators were attentive and responsive to children's needs, actively assisting those who required support while encouraging independence and positive social interactions. Warm and respectful interactions between educators and children were observed throughout the inspection.

All fire exits were clear and free of debris, and emergency evacuation plans were visibly posted as required.

Within both learning environments, evidence of children's creativity and engagement was clearly displayed. Open-ended art experiences were showcased throughout the center, including examples of children's artwork and paintings created during the day. Current learning stories were displayed and documented children's interests, explorations, and learning experiences. Examples included learning stories titled "The Floor is Lava" and "Exploring Watercolor."

A notable project observed was a large shark display created collaboratively by educators and children. Educators had created the visual display, and children contributed their own shark facts.

Staff files were reviewed, organized, and complete. In addition, five randomly selected children's files were reviewed and were also complete.

The outdoor learning environment offered multiple areas for exploration and play. One area featured a large plexiglass panel used as a creative painting surface. During the inspection, an educator placed their hand on one side of the panel while a child painted on the opposite side, creating an engaging and interactive art experience. Outdoor materials supported imaginative and sensory play, including mud kitchens equipped with real pots, pans, and other authentic wooden materials. A large wooden boat structure was also observed and
