General Comments

I met an educator at the door upon arrival as he was going out to clear the walkway from snow. There wasn't much built-up snow even though it was snowing. The centre was continuing to monitor walkways and address as needed.

Children upstairs were engaged in a variety of activities: puzzles, lego, cars, electronic games and kitchen play. Two educators in the room were sitting with the children and the third was walking around checking in with groups of children. The success of a child completing a puzzle was celebrated as this was a newer activity for this child.

Some of the older children downstairs were playing with electronics but many were engaged in imaginative play. An older child begins some of the imaginative elements and friends quickly join in.

Children were familiar with the routine of lunch and quickly washed their hands and grabbed their lunch bags. The centre is very clean and a variety of materials present appropriate for school age children. The children appeared happy and very comfortable with their educators.
