General Comments On the afternoon of my monitoring visit, the afterschoolers had a special movie and popcorn party planned for completing their first 100 hours of their "1000 Hours Outside Challenge." The educator explained that the children really enjoyed this challenge and when they accomplished their first goal they also made a donation to the shelter to do something positive for the community. The afterschoolers each have a scrapbook with their art work from the school year. The educators have a good rapport with the children and show interest in what they are doing and how their day was. As soon as the children were done eating, the educators noticed that the children needed to release some energy and they went outside to play before their movie. Educators worked as a team and I observed lots of communication. This contributed to a smooth flowing program.
