General Comments

Upon my arrival some of the children were napping and the children who didn't nap played outside. The children who napped also had a chance to play outside as they woke up. After everyone got a chance at free play, then they would go inside to have a snack.

The children seemed to enjoy their time outside. They participated in creative and dramatic play with their peers and with the educators. The children were pretending to make pies and soups with natural outdoor materials. Others were playing 'store'. There were chances for them to play cooperatively as well as individually during their free play.

I saw more program planning on this visit and the educators are planning using the various elements of the NB curriculum. The planning is done weekly and there are creative and diverse ideas for the program. Programing incorporates both indoor and outdoor planning and it is flexible depending on what the children are interested in on each day. I see great improvements and I encourage the educators to continue working on this. I also saw children's work displayed in the center which are swapped out to be kept up to date. I also saw learning stories displayed which are very well done. I suggest that the dates be put on the learning stories as well.

I observed lots of positive child guidance during my visit. I saw the use of techniques such as redirection, distraction, gentle reminders, use of appropriate humor, active listening, and explanation of boundaries to the children. The educators were engaged with the children during play, and would also give appropriate time for children to play by themselves while the educators observed from close by. They showed care, kindness, interest, and compassion to the children while I was there. The program seemed to be running well during my visit.
