| General Comments Two classrooms were on a walk during the observation period; therefore, observations were conducted in Room 17 and Room 4. Room 17 The learning environment included invitations focused on letter and print practice as well as fine motor skill development. Children engaged in a variety of self-directed activities, including constructing an obstacle course. One child used a timer to manage turn-taking, while another explored a calculator, demonstrating early numeracy interest. The educator provided positive child guidance, reminding children to take turns and reassuring them that everyone would have an opportunity to participate. This supported the development of social-emotional skills such as patience and cooperative play. Documentation displayed within the room reflected a strong emphasis on outdoor learning experiences. Room 4 Children were observed outdoors with the educators. Activities included painting on cement using baking soda and food coloring, drawing, and searching for worms. All educators were actively engaged and participating alongside the children, supporting exploration, creativity, and inquiry-based learning. |
