General Comments
A Monitoring Inspection was completed this morning. There were 10 children and 2 educators present. Children's interests included Superhero's and Valentine's Day. A Superhero word web was observed on the wall, and several Superhero characteristics were listed - kind, caring, nice, etc. Children were also excited to show off their Superhero Clubhouse. Children were also observed taking part in a Valentine's Day activity called "Raining Hearts". Children played with a parachute, and moved the parachute up and down, while an educator dropped heart shapes onto the parachute. Children smiled and laughed, trying their bests to get the hearts off, by moving the parachute. Documentation was seen throughout the facility. Children were excited to show me their journals, which were full of unique drawings and mark making creations. The art, building, and literacy stations were well stocked. Loose parts were seen throughout the facility, for children to use during art, building, and creating. Children were also observed taking part in free play, in each of these areas. QAM talked to educators about the outside fence. Due to the snow, QAM did not see the fence today, but educators were aware that the fence would require some repairs prior to their renewal inspection.
