General Comments

When I arrived both groups upstairs were getting ready to go outside. The educators took the water bottles attendance sheets and first aid kits with them outside.

Programing is documented in the preschool classrooms. Some of the children's projects are also posted on the walls.

The school-age children were occupied with different activities when I arrived. The space is divided in different stations and there are many different materials available to the children such has blocks, Legos, pretend play materials, books and arts and crafts. Some children were playing with a large basin of water with seas shells and sea animals.

The educators were seen engaged in play with the children in all rooms, indoors and outdoors. Educators were seen consoling children when needed.

Materials both upstairs and downstairs are varied and in sufficient quantity.

When the children came in from outside, they were asked to wash their hands and had lunch. The educator was seen sitting at the table, also having lunch with the children.

Everything is in compliance; I recommend for renewal.
