General Comments

Upon arrival for the monitoring visit, children were cleaning up and preparing for snack. The operator used different techniques for child guidance depending on the situation. She spoke to the children on their level in a calm and nurturing voice and would ask the children how their actions were making their friends feel. She also used open-ended questions and enthusiasm. When a child did not want to try his snack, the operator said, "What do the sticks taste like? Is it like a pretzel or cracker?" and "I bet they are so yummy"

The children are very excited for their upcoming Halloween party and one child had the opportunity to pass out his treat bags after snack.

The operator shared that they have been going on various field trips this Fall. There were pictures and documentation posted at the children's level from the apple orchard and dairy farm.

After snack, the operator read "Room on a Broom" to the children. She used different voices and encouraged the children to do actions to extend the story. There are plants, small couches, lamps and twinkle lights in the reading area.

Children also had the opportunity to do art. There were wooden pumpkin stencils to trace. The operator and children problem solved together when they realized they didn't have orange paint but had red and yellow. They created orange paint and also had glitter to decorate their art.
