General Comments
I was screened upon arrival and the center appears to be following COVID guidelines well. During my visit I observed the children engaging in free play. Some were making art with different materials, other children were 'cooking' in the kitchen center and they were making tea, soup, and magic potions. Others were playing with the story board and making their own stories. There are a variety of materials for the children to use and they are accessible for the children on low shelves. The use of the NB curriculum is evident. I observed a number of positive child guidance techniques used by the educator. She demonstrated active listening and asked many open ended questions to the children. She appeared interested in what the children were telling her. She used techniques such as gentle reminders, positive reinforcement, time reminders, encouragement, and she explained things patiently to the children. She gave clear directions to the children when required. At the end of the morning session, the children were about to get ready to go, but then a few children showed a strong interest about a globe on the shelf. They started asking questions, and the educator took the time to explain parts of the globe to the children as the children asked questions about it. The children then got ready to leave. The program appears to be running well.
