General Comments

Licensing staff arrived as children were engaged in free play within the classroom. Children were observed playing with playdough, using glue, and sorting gems and loose parts. The sand sensory table was open for children to access, and the light table was turned on with tracing letters and markers set on top. Children were also enjoying looking through the scholastic book order and circling the books they were interested in to show their guardians.

In the drop-in room dinosaurs, dinosaur puzzles and dinosaur books were placed on an astro turf table. The block area also had a book called Block Mess added to it, which was a nice addition to the activity area. Other areas within the classroom included dramatic play kitchen with materials and a gross motor area.

Some children were observed sitting at the table and creating rainbows by gluing different art materials in a variety of colors to cardboard arcs.

Staff and children files were reviewed and were well maintained and contained all required documentation.

Preschool children were observed transitioning to clean up routine, story time and getting themselves ready for pick up. The educator engaged in pleasant conversation with the children and provided appropriate supervision throughout the inspection. Positive behaviour strategies were observed at all times.
