General Comments

A Monitoring Inspection occurred June 25, 2025.

The children were observed during indoor free play and snack time. Observations and documentation showed that children were engaged in a range of hands-on, collaborative activities, such as caring for caterpillars and watching them hatch into butterflies, constructing a cardboard Hot Wheels track together, and creating a summer bucket list as a group. Throughout the inspection children showed enthusiasm for active outdoor play as they prepared for walks to nearby parks and water play areas. Proper handwashing was observed before and after snack, and steps and platforms were available to support children in reaching regular-sized toilets and sinks with independence.

Educators supported these interests by asking open-ended questions, actively listening to the children's answers, and using paraphrasing to ensure they had understood the children's thoughts. Daily incident logs were maintained, and the environment was thoughtfully arranged with well-defined learning centers for building, reading, dramatic play, and science. Books were carefully chosen to reflect the children's current interests, and webs completed with the children had been expanded upon by educators to extend their learning further.

Outdoor play was scheduled for at least one hour in each four-hour block of care, weather permitting, and educators created meaningful opportunities to continue curriculum-based learning outdoors while also bringing elements of the natural world into the classroom. Traffic areas were kept clean, and outdoor walkways were clear and free of clutter, ensuring a safe and welcoming environment. Drinking water was readily available throughout the day, snacks were provided at least every three hours, and meals were offered at recognized meal periods. Allergy information was clearly posted for all children, and daily routines were displayed in each room using visual schedules. Emergency evacuation procedures were posted in prominent locations, and monthly emergency evacuations were completed and documented as required.
