General Comments

When I arrived for the monitoring visit, the children were finishing up their morning snack.

The operator followed the lead of the children and the morning had a nice balance of purposefully planned activities and free play. There were multiple invitations to play set out- a pumpkin coloring page, a pumpkin counting activity, and a table with playdough.

The operator read a story and had a felt board with pieces to compliment the story. She also had the children choose other books they wanted her to read. Throughout the story, the operator stopped to talk about the pictures in the story and answer the questions the children had.

During handwashing after a washroom break, the operator helped the children and sang their ABC's to encourage proper handwashing techniques (how to wash thoroughly and for the appropriate length of time.)

When the operator was preparing for the children to go outside, she asked them if they would like to take the baby dolls outside. The children had a lot of imaginative play with the dolls during the morning and the operator offered the opportunity to have this play outdoors extended in the rain.

Outdoors, the children helped the operator pick the remaining tomatoes out of the garden.

Please remember to add the outlet cover to the plug by the table since you have rearranged some furniture.
