General Comments

Preschool children were just finishing up snack and getting ready to go outside, while the school aged children were just getting off the bus when I arrived for today's monitoring inspection.

Preschool educators were observed encouraging children to ready for outside on their own but did not hesitate to lend a helping a hand whenever the children asked.

The school aged children were very excited today because they had a new group of children start in their room while renovations are being made at their usual location. School aged children were observed playing freely around the room and getting acquainted with each other. Some activities that they were observed participating in were hanging out in the reading corner, Lego, a sort of fort building, boardgames, crafts and dress up.

Both groups of children finished their day off outside playing in their respected outside play space.
