General Comments
Children had 30 minutes of outdoor play time when dismissed from school. Educators placed themselves throughout the playground to maintain sight lines. When going inside, children were reminded to wash hands. A choice between sitting and having snack or playing was given. The indoor space for the younger afterschoolers was set up with a craft station that had Christmas stationary, red and green buttons, small gift bows, and other art materials. A sensory table and a rug with building materials were also inviting areas that were set up in the room. The older afterschoolers were creating Christmas cards and building with Lego. The children had asked for Christmas music, so the educator played Christmas carols for them. Child guidance was positive. Educators were observed speaking at children's level and in a respectful, kind voice. Licensing staff also observed educators sitting with the children asking them questions about their play and taking interest in what they were saying.
