General Comments

When I arrived Lynne and the children were outside.

The outdoor space is all set up now. Lots of natural elements and loose parts to encourage imagination. Lynn is always engaged with the children, encouraging independence and brainstorming. Instead of fixing a problem for them, she encourages them to brainstorm together to find a solution, but still helps them when they need it.

Positive reinforcement and encouragements were often heard.

When the children came back inside, they played with train tracks in the garage and then came inside into their play area and she read a few books to them. Its Dinosaur week and she picked up new books from the library. Afterwards, then played with blocks. The children washed their hands and had lunch. Then they had their nap.

The indoor space is well organized, the children have access to lots of materials of different interests.

Everything is in compliance; I recommend for renewal.
